*For a moment I half-see my brother's face among the glimmering, shifting shapes.
But only for a moment.*

A deeply moving meditation on memory, grief and loss, and of the redemptive power of stories and nature.

In his late thirties, Edward Parnell found himself trapped in the nightmare of a recurring family tragedy. He turned to his bookshelves, finding comfort in the ghosts and wild places that obsessed him as a boy.

Part memoir, part travelogue, Ghostland journeys around the ancient stones, stark shores and folkloric woodlands of Britain's spectred isle.

From the uncanny tales of M. R. James and Charles Dickens to the on-screen horrors of The Wicker Man and some disturbing 1970s children's television, Edward explores what has haunted other writers, film-makers and artists – and what is haunting him.
